To Whom It May Concern:

As a former executive in Turner Broadcasting, Mattel, Parker Brothers and Lotus Development who has transitioned into managing family and serving the community on the Reed School District Foundation, Tiburon Little League Board, Star Academy Board, Founding Advisory Board of Bridge the Gap and major supporter of JUMA Ventures and Positive Coaching Alliance, I am pleased to support Jake Nordstrom and his Eagle Scout project that brings Cuba youth baseball players to the US.

Last summer, when Jake came home from the Cuba humanitarian and baseball trip with my son, his obsession with giving Back to Cuba was on fire. I have no doubt that his determination to bring a group of Cuban boys to the US for an experience that will let them bring back skills and inspiration to their country will become reality.

I have watched Jake grow up in the community and his consistent enthusiasm for life and people reveals the type of contribution he will make to his family, community and more. Jake has a unique combination of savviness, empathy and charisma that wakes you up. We are supporting him anyway we can to reach his goals with this project and hope you will see the value as well. I couldn't imagine a more perfect person to fund and manage these efforts and have every confidence in his abilities to make this a success.
